New MPs - Their First Weeks

From next week, the MPs elected just a few days before will be entering the House of Commons to formally start their new roles. One can expect various new faces as the new MPs head to find their seats on the green benches. So how best to connect with these newcomers, whose varying experiences and background will have prepared them differently for the challenges ahead? Dods has sought to address these questions with an overview of an MP's experience in their first few months in Westminster, from securing their office arrangements to confirming their party role.
